County to work on fire safety
enhancements

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

The March 12 meeting of the San Diego County Board of Supervisors included a direction to the county’s chief administrative officer to enhance fire safety in the county.

The supervisors’ 5-0 vote directed the chief administrative officer to work with the San Diego County Regional Fire Authority, the county Sheriff’s Department, other county departments and outside agencies to develop a plan to enhance protection against wildfires in existing and future communities and to return to the board within 90 days with recommendations.

The focus will be on five objectives: developing and implementing a more cohesive pre-fire strategy including expansion and increased support to fire safe councils; enhancing pre-fire vegetation management including the expansion of community chipping programs and working with agencies at all levels of government to develop a cooperative vegetation management plan including potential legislative changes to reduce or eliminate burdensome regulations for controlled burns and fire breaks; improving pre-fire emergency planning including enhancing existing technology

Defense calls McStay’s mom, sergeant and agent supervisor to the stand

The trial of Charles “Chase” Merritt continued last week in the deaths of Joseph and Summer McStay, along with their two young sons, as seen in this file photo. The Fallbrook family disappeared Feb. 4, 2010, and their remains were found in a shallow grave in the high desert three-and-a-half years later.

Jeff Pack
Writer

The defense team called Susan Blake, the mother of Joseph McStay, to testify Monday, March 18, in the case against Charles “Chase” Merritt who is charged with killing her son, his wife and their two young children.

The McStay family live in the Lake Rancho Viejo housing development east of Interstate 15 in Fallbrook, was last seen alive Feb. 4, 2010. Relatives reported them missing a few days later.

The San Diego County Sheriff’s Department and the FBI handled the investigation into the family’s disappearance in the early years with no resolution.

In November 2013, the skeletal remains of the four family members were discovered in shallow graves by a motorcyclist in the Mojave desert. Records show that all four were beaten to death, most likely with a sledgehammer. At that point, the investigation was taken over by the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department.

Prosecutors maintain that greed was the basis for Merritt

forward to new superintendent in May

Cari Hachmann
Staff Writer

The Fallbrook Union High School District Board of Trustees hopes to install a new and permanent superintendent by May 6.

Current interim superintendent Dr. Lou Obermeyer, who started work Jan. 7, only planned to lead the district through the end of March.

Board President Diane Summers said the board has hired consultants to help with the process. She said another interim may be needed to fill the gap until the permanent position is filled.

Summers said the board has recently been holding stakeholder meetings that involve staff, students, parents and community members. The purpose of the meetings is for those people to express their vision of what they are looking for in a new superintendent.

The search is being conducted by consultants McPherson & Jacobson who are partners with the California School Boards Association.

CSBA is an organization that provides districts and county offices of education with a streamlined process for hiring, from recruiting possible candidates to the selection of a superintendent.

Raquel Madden, a public affairs representative at CSBA, said, “CBSA’s focus is on recruiting the best qualified candidates from a pool of superintendents

approves
Groundwater
Sustainability
Agency MOU

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

The development of a groundwater sustainability plan for the Upper San Luis Rey Groundwater Sub basin includes a Memorandum of Understanding identifying activity for the various agencies involved, and the Rainbow Municipal Water District has approved that MOU.

Michael Mack was not at the Jan. 22 Rainbow board meeting, but the other four board members all voted in favor of approving the MOU.

“We’re developing a groundwater sustainability agency,” said Rainbow general manager Tom Kennedy. “It’s a process to start monitoring groundwater.”

In 2014 the State of California adopted the Sustainable Groundwater Management Act. The intent of the law is to strengthen local groundwater. The state Department of Water Resources designated basins throughout California as high, medium, low or very low priority. The SGMA required local agencies to form a GSA for high-priority and medium-priority basins by July 2017 and has a January 2022 deadline to develop plans to achieve long-term groundwater sustainability. The state’s 127 basins which require a GSA include the San Luis Rey Valley Groundwater Basin, which is designated as a medium-priority basin.

In August 2016 the San Diego County Board of Supervisors adopted a resolution for the county to become a Groundwater Sustainability Agency for the San Luis Rey, San Pasqual Valley, and

Car clubs rev up support at Mission Theater event

Cari Hachmann
Staff Writer

Support poured into Fallbrook’s Historic Mission Theater Friday night when two local classic cars clubs hosted a private dinner and movie night downtown March 22.

It was the first time in over 30 years that a film had been shown commercially to the public at the theater. The film chosen for the grand occasion was the iconic 1973 comedy, “American Graffiti.” Directed and co-written by George Lucas, the film portrays a nostalgic, semi-autobiographical glance at the American teenager circa 1962, before “the sixties” kicked in and changed everything. Resident Rosemary West and her date, Jack Janzen, left their vintage car in the parking lot before making their way into the theater dressed in period attire from the 1950s and 1960s.

Other members of the Fallbrook Vintage Car Club and Shafter’s Car Club parked their vintage cars out front and entered the theater.

Beverages were catered by the Fallbrook Film Society and Prohibition Station while Brooktown Kitchen & Coffee provided a menu of pizza, popcorn, hot dogs and other items.

Representatives of both car clubs said they were there to show their support for the theater and its new owner, who has big plans to revive it. The theater at 200 N. Main Ave. was built in 1948 and recently purchased by Fallbrook Realtor Roy Moosa.

“We are here because Roy is opening a landmark in Fallbrook,” Steve Shapiro, car show chair for Vintage, said. “We certainly want to support him and see this be a successful venture. Many established people are here getting together and having some fun.”

Shafter’s car club was also there to participate and support Moosa.

“The theater is beautiful,”

Shafter’s president, Ralph Suarez, said.

Roy Moosa and his family members were in attendance. His daughter, Jennifer, 31, stood at the entrance, selling tickets and greeting guests, while his wife Christine mingled with locals and helped keep the place tidy, along with Roy’s brother.

Moosa purchased Mission Theater in July 2018 with the intention of bringing it back to life and making it a bustling attraction for downtown Fallbrook.

“The goal is to have things happening here all of the time. It’s the only property in town that has the ability to do that, so it’s important that we make it happen,” Moosa said.

Victoria Stover, Mission’s booking and house manager, offered guests a tour of the apartment above the lobby, which was built for the theater’s original owners to live in.

“This will eventually be our lounge,” Stover said. With hardwood floors and windows facing Main Street, the upstairs room is decorated with some of its original 1950s furniture.

The theater has been busy with renovations.

Stover listed off some of the latest: painting, added mood lighting, restoration on the front of the building, repaired the auditorium chairs, resealed the floors, ordered a new up-to-date mechanical screen for film viewings and more.

“We’ve done so much,” she said.

The theater is also working on getting its permits to serve its own food, beer and wine.

In the meantime, husband and wife team, Leo and Barbara Romero of the Fallbrook Film Society said they were happy to help out in catering the event.

“We want to bring back the excitement to this town,” Leo Romero said.

The couple said they plan to use their profits from selling beer and wine to help bring back the Fallbrook Film Festival.

Moosa gave a presentation on the theater’s history and the history of motion pictures in small town America before the film was shown.

The theater’s restoration is only about 50-percent complete, Moosa said, but the theater did just purchase a new $13,000 white screen for future film showings.

Chris Sims, 35, is the theater’s new control room technician and marketing coordinator. Having earned a film degree from California State University Monterey Bay with a business minor in marketing management, the film director said he landed his dream job at Mission, where he started March 1.

“I am super excited. From what we hear every time we have an event here, it makes downtown really boom, as far as helping other businesses, and that’s definitely one of our missions here, to boost the local economy,” Sims said. “We are definitely community-focused.”

During his history presentation, Moosa said it is hard for small town theaters to survive, and many remain closed. He said the challenges are many, but it’s worth it to become a community theater. He thanked the evening’s crowd for their show of support.

John Vaughn, a local of Fallbrook for 20 years, said he’s excited to still have the Mission Theater in operation.

“It’s an asset to the community,” he said.

Vaughn said reviving the theater is a great idea, “And if anyone can put it on, it’s Roy.”

Guests watch “American Graffiti” inside the Mission Theater’s auditorium Friday. It was the first time in over 30 years a film had been shown commercially to the public.

OPINION

Pointing fingers will not reform bad policies; changing priorities will

Sen. Brian W. Jones
Special to Village News

Another horrific story from the Sanctuary State of California is yet another reason for Senate Bill 54 supporters to understand the fatal flaw in this ill-advised law imposed on California by majority Democrats.

According to local law enforcement, Carlos Eduardo Arevalo Carranza, an illegal immigrant, was charged with the brutal murder of a San Jose woman in her home. The victim, described as a friend to everyone in the neighborhood, was found dead by her son and a co-worker in her bedroom, Feb. 28.

The San Jose Police Department had arrested Carranza, March 10, for methamphetamine possession. DNA samples were collected; he was cited and allowed to leave. Incredibly, just 24 hours later, March 11, SJPD’s crime lab returned a DNA match, and a warrant was issued for his arrest. He was subsequently found and taken back into custody.

Following his 2013 deportation by Homeland Security and subsequent return to California, Carranza has been arrested for: drug possession in 2015; burglary in 2015; battery on an officer, resisting arrest, entering and occupying a property in 2016; battery in 2016; false imprisonment in 2017; possession of drug paraphernalia in 2018; possession of methamphetamine and drug paraphernalia in 2018; prowling in 2018; presenting false identification to an officer, possession of drug paraphernalia, prowling and trespassing while resident was present in 2018 and possession of methamphetamine and drug paraphernalia in 2019.

Additionally, Carranza is currently on probation for possession of drug paraphernalia, false imprisonment and burglary.

What is more infuriating is that U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement had placed six detainers for this individual, two in Los Angeles County and four in Santa Clara County.

Every one of these detainers was ignored because of the state or local sanctuary law. The result? A 59-year-old woman in San Jose was brutally murdered.

Thanks to the majority Democrats running California, people like Carranza are everywhere, but residents do not have a right to know this information and immigration services are being prevented from deporting them.

Gov. Gavin Newsom shuts down the death penalty because it was too emotional for him to enforce the will of the people. Attorney General Becerra and the majority Democrats are too wrapped up in identity politics to want to deport criminal aliens.

I will continue to stand for those residents who support law and order and those who seek fairness, equity and justice in the law. Together we can send the message that enough is enough.

Sen. Brian W. Jones is chair of the Senate Republican Caucus and was elected to the California State Senate in 2018 representing the 38th Senate District which includes Escondido, Lemon Grove, El Cajon, La Mesa, Santee, Poway, San Marcos, Lakeside, Valley Center, Rancho Santa Fe, Julian, Ramona, Rancho San Diego, Bonsall, Fallbrook, Borrego Springs and parts of the city of San Diego.

Owed Money?

Assemblymember Marie Waldron
AD-75 (R)

California could be holding some of your money. According to State Controller Betty Yee, California is sitting on unclaimed properties valued at $9.3 billion! But there’s great news – you can get it back. I encourage you to visit claimit.ca.gov to see if any of these unclaimed funds belong to you.

How did this huge pot accumulate? Under California’s Unclaimed Property Law, businesses like banks and insurance companies are required to transfer property to the Controller’s office if it goes unclaimed for a specified period of time, usually three years. Common types of unclaimed property are bank accounts, stocks, bonds, uncashed checks, insurance benefits, wages, and the contents of safe deposit boxes. Funds are held for as long as it takes to reunite the property with its rightful owner, which explains why the pot keeps growing.

Checking to see if you have unclaimed funds is easy. Once you access the website, simply type in your name and see if you’re listed. If it looks like you have some funds coming to you, you can file a claim immediately if the value is less than $5,000. Higher amounts require you to mail a form and takes longer to process. Also, please remember that there is no charge to retrieve your property from the State Controller – so watch out for scams that try to charge for this free service.

Just this February, 33,000 people received their unclaimed properties, valued at over $23 million. You could have been one of them. Don’t let the state keep funds that may legitimately belong to you – visit the Controller’s website today!

If you have any additional questions, feel free to contact the Controller’s Unclaimed Property Division at (800) 992-4647.

Kudos to students of the month

As a 73-year-old retiree, I seldom get to meet young people still in high school, so I very much appreciate reading about Fallbrook’s students of the month. The March 21 issue was particularly delightful to read. It’s hard to stay focused as a teenager, and that Kiyahn Hakeem has found her path, Tiane Maestas is stretching his abilities, Brian Medina is expanding his world and Katie Kehl is looking forward with excitement to the future, fills me with hope.

Thanks Village News for honoring these young people’s lives. Even though they aren’t directly related to me, I get pleasure from reading about their success. Keep going students!

‘California Dreaming’ or California leaving?

In December 1965, the Mamas and Papas’ “California Dreaming” debuted on the radio across the country. The song quickly became the anthem song for a new generation and captured the imagination of millions of Americans who dreamed of living in California. Young working families from all over the country as well as from Canada, Europe and Mexico migrated to the Golden State, inspired by the promise of business-friendly opportunities, affordable housing, great weather, low taxes and an unmatched quality of life. Overnight the expansive avocado and citrus groves across the state were giving way to an explosion of suburban sprawl transformed by the massive influx in the state’s population growth.

Back then, the forward-looking state politicians invested heavily in the educational systems, and they made massive investments in roads and highways and in transportation and water infrastructure. We had a thriving diversity of industries flourishing throughout the state, and our schools were always ranked in the Top 10 in the nation. Hundreds of thousands of working families were living the “American/ Californian Dream” with home ownership and family incomes outpacing the rest of the country. California’s explosive growth and endless job opportunities were so phenomenal during the 50s and 60s that this period is often called “California’s Golden Years.”

Sadly, today California is a mere shadow of what it once was with our schools ranked 46th in the nation. Our state income, sales and gasoline taxes are among the highest in the country. We now have the largest homeless and undocumented alien population. Our roads and highways are in total disrepair, and the state’s water infrastructure is crumbling. Once the envy of the nation, our state is now deeply in debt with one of the highest state poverty levels, and the quality of life is no longer aspirational. Now thousands of working families are leaving California because the state’s taxes are too high, the cost of living is too expensive, affordable housing doesn’t exist and because our schools are failing our children. And the “California Dreaming” that captured the imagination of so many Americans has sadly been replaced by thousands of middle-class Californian’s leaving the state.

So, what has happened since the Golden Age of the 1960s? In the last 20 years in particular, the state has been “grossly mismanaged.” To accuse the lawmakers in the state of “governing maleficence” is perhaps too charitable. But whatever you want to call the actions of the ruling class in Sacramento, one thing is for sure. They are willfully failing in their governance, and they are directly responsible for the spiraling demise of the state. In all but two years of the last 20 years, the Democrats have been in control of the state Senate, the state Assembly and the governor’s office. Yes, I know Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger was governor for six years, but after his signature propositions were soundly defeated, he spent the last four years in office governing like a Democratic Party loyalist. He seemed to completely forget that he was elected as a Republican.

So I know what you’re thinking, what needs to be done to turn the state around? First and foremost, we need to drop our party affiliations and begin to rebuild the state for “the greater good of all Californians.” California is not lost, unless we continue to support and vote for the incumbent ruling class. I place most of the blame and shame for the condition of the state squarely on the shoulders of the Democrats where it belongs; however, what is needed is a new political class that forges alliances based on the cultural and economic needs of the “working class” and with respect to the hopes and dreams of all Californians. A new political Renaissance is needed to get us out of the malaise we find ourselves in today, and so we can return to the inspirational state that once gave birth to so many “California Dreams.”

Offers available in AZ, CA, CO, ND, NM, NV, OR, SD and WA. Portfolio by Wells Fargo® customers are eligible to receive an additional bonus interest rate on these accounts.³

1. To qualify for this offer, you must have a new or existing Platinum Savings account and enroll the account in this offer between 03/25/2019 and 05/31/2019. This offer is subject to change at any time, without notice. This offer is available only to Platinum Savings customers in the following states: AZ, CA, CO, ND, NM, NV, OR, SD and WA. In order to earn the Special Interest Rate of 2.08% (Special Rate), you must deposit $25,000 in new money (from sources outside of Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., or its affiliates) to the enrolled savings account and maintain a minimum daily account balance of $25,000 throughout the term of this offer. The corresponding Annual Percentage Yield (APY) for this offer is 2.10%. The Special Rate will be applied to the enrolled savings account for a period of 12 months, starting on the date the account is enrolled in the offer. However, for any day during that 12 month period that the daily account balance is less than the $25,000 minimum, the Special Rate will not apply, and the interest rate will revert to the standard interest rate applicable to your Platinum Savings account. As of 02/15/2019, the standard interest rate and APY for a Platinum Savings account in AZ, CA, CO, ND, NM, NV, OR, SD and WA with an account balance of $0.01 and above is 0.05% (0.05% APY). Each tier shown reflects the current minimum daily collected balance required to obtain the applicable APY. Interest is compounded daily and paid monthly. The amount of interest earned is based on the daily collected balances in the account. Upon the expiration of the 12 month promotional period, standard interest rates apply. Minimum to open a Platinum Savings account is $25. A monthly service fee of $12 applies in any month the account falls below a $3,500 minimum daily balance. Fees may reduce earnings. Interest rates are variable and subject to change without notice. Wells Fargo may limit the amount you deposit to a Platinum Savings account to an aggregate of $1 million. Offer not available to Private Banking or Wealth customers. 2. Annual Percentage Yield (APY) is effective for accounts opened between 03/25/2019 to 05/31/2019. The 11-month New Dollar CD special requires a minimum of $25,000 brought to Wells Fargo from sources outside of Wells Fargo Bank N.A., or its affiliates to earn the advertised APY. Public Funds and Wholesale accounts are not eligible for this offer. APY assumes interest remains on deposit until maturity. Interest is compounded daily. Payment of interest on CDs is based on term: For terms less than 12 months (365 days), interest may be paid monthly, quarterly, semi-annually, or at maturity (the end of the term). For terms of 12 months or more, interest may be paid monthly, quarterly, semi-annually, or annually. A fee for early withdrawal will be imposed and could reduce earnings on this account. Special Rates are applicable to the initial term of the CD only. At maturity, the Special Rate CD will automatically renew for a term of 6 months, at the interest rate and APY in effect for CDs on renewal date not subject to a Special Rate, unless the Bank has notified you otherwise. 1,2. Due to the new money requirement, accounts may only be opened at your local branch. Wells Fargo reserves the right to modify or discontinue the offer at any time without notice. Minimum new money deposit requirement of at least $25,000 is for this offer only and cannot be transferred to another account to qualify for any other consumer deposit offer. If you wish to take advantage of another consumer deposit offer requiring a minimum new money deposit, you will be required to do so with another new money deposit as stated in the offer requirements and qualifications. Offer cannot be combined with any other consumer deposit offer, except the Portfolio by Wells Fargo $500 offer, available from March 25, 2019 until May 31, 2019. Offer cannot be reproduced, purchased, sold, transferred, or traded. 3. The Portfolio by Wells Fargo program has a $30 monthly service fee, which can be avoided when you have one of the following qualifying balances: $25,000 or more in qualifying linked bank deposit accounts (checking, savings, CDs, FDIC-insured IRAs) or $50,000 or more in any combination of qualifying linked banking, brokerage (available through Wells Fargo Advisors, LLC) and credit balances (including 10% of mortgage balances, certain mortgages not eligible). If the Portfolio by Wells Fargo relationship is terminated, the bonus interest rate on all eligible savings accounts, and discounts or fee waivers on other products and services, will discontinue and revert to the Bank's then-current applicable rate or fee. For bonus interest rates on time accounts, this change will occur upon renewal. If the Portfolio by Wells Fargo relationship is terminated, the remaining unlinked Wells Fargo Portfolio Checking or Wells Fargo Prime Checking account will be converted to another checking product or closed. © 2019 Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. Zoning Administrator approves new Sprint facility in Bonsall

Village News Correspondent

San Diego County’s zoning administrator approved a modification to a minor use permit which allows a wireless telecommunications facility in Bonsall.

The March 21 decision of Zoning Administrator Noah Alvey allows Sprint to replace an existing monopole and construct a false broadleaf tree on the property in the 3400 block of East Vista Way. Twelve panel antennas and 12 remote radio units will be mounted on the 50-foot-tall false tree.

A 2003 amendment to the county’s Zoning Ordinance adopted a wireless communications facility policy which requires a major use permit to site a facility in an area with residential or agricultural zoning, but if a minor use permit had already been granted only a modification rather than a major use permit is required for changes.

The 4.2-acre Bonsall property has A70 Limited Agriculture zoning, but the initial minor use permit was approved in October 1996 and approved a 40-foot tower along with an exemption from the 35-foot height limit while also approving a 200-square-foot concrete block auxiliary building.

The minor use permit was modified in February 2001 to allow the existing 48-foot monopole with 12 panel antennas and add one equipment cabinet. Because the 1996 height exemption allowed structures up to 53 feet, no new height exemption was needed.

The wireless communications ordinance included an amortization period for monopoles, lattice towers or other facilities not camouflaged or designed as a false tree or building component. The replacement facility addresses the amortization schedule, and in July 2018 the Bonsall Sponsor Group voted 5-0 to recommend approval of the changes.

The panel antennas and remote radio units will be mounted no higher than 44 feet. The existing concrete masonry enclosure, which is designed as a storage shed to blend in with the agricultural landscape, will house the new equipment cabinets.

Board Sets April 9 Workshop to Study Buying, Selling Electricity

Gig Conaughton
County of San Diego
Communications Office

San Diego County’s Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday, March 26, to start studying the idea of buying and selling electricity to county residents by scheduling a public workshop April 9 to hear from experts, consumer groups and other jurisdictions.

The workshop is scheduled for 1:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 9, in the board chambers, room 310, at the County Administration Center, 1600 Pacific Highway, in San Diego.

Supervisors voted unanimously in February to study the idea of Community Choice Energy programs, also known as community choice aggregation. These programs allow cities and counties to buy or generate and sell electricity to residents and businesses as alternatives to public utilities like San Diego Gas & Electric.

In its February vote, the board directed county staff to return in October – with public updates every two months – with a feasibility study that would include options, including the option of not creating a program, pros and cons and a business plan for the board to consider.

The scheduled April 9 public workshop will mark the first of the bimonthly updates.

DINING

Fish Fry adds extra fries

A large serving of salmon comes with seasoned boiled potatoes and vegetables along with tartar sauce at the Knights of Columbus Fish Fry.

The fried cod plate includes a helping of french fries, made with Burbank russet potatoes which are sold specifically for making fries.

Lucette Moramarco
Associate Editor

The Knights of Columbus have again taken over the kitchen at St. Peter’s hall for their Lenten Fish Fry which was started more than 30 years ago. They began this year’s Friday night dinners March 8 and will continue through April 12, from 5 to 7 p.m. Seafood choices are fried cod, shrimp, the cod and shrimp combo and a salmon plate.

Cod and shrimp plates include homemade fries and coleslaw while the baked salmon comes with boiled potatoes and vegetables – carrots, green beans, corn, peppers and onion. The fried fish plate cost $8, and the others are $10 each. The child’s fried fish plate is $5.

New this year, diners can also get a side of fries for $2. No matter which dinner plate is chosen, there is enough food on it for two meals for most people. My leftover salmon and veggies made a delicious lunch a few days later.

The dinner also includes ice water, tea or coffee and ice cream for dessert. For those who like beer or wine with their dinner, tickets for those can be bought along with sodas and bottled water. Available condiments for the meals include ketchup, tartar sauce and malt vinegar.

Fish fries on Friday are popular with Catholics as they abstain from meat during Lent, which is the 40-day period before Easter, but lots of other local residents like eating fish as witnessed by the growing numbers showing up for these fish dinners.

The first two dinners this year served 308 meals March 8 and 309 meals March 15 which is a significant increase from last year’s dinners. They sold 236 dinners the first Friday night, Feb. 16, and 286 dinners Feb. 23, 2018.

When I arrived at the hall last Friday, March 22, the line of people waiting for dinner stretched the length of the hall and across the end of it, headed toward another 300-plus served night.

While the dinner is not just for Catholics, its popularity made it a good opportunity for the new reverend to meet many of his parishioners. Father Arturo Uribe showed up to meet them and greet them that night. He arrived at St. Peter the Apostle Church March 20, coming from Chula Vista to replace the now retired Father Ramon Marrufo.

St. Peter’s hall is located at 450 S. Stage Coach Lane in Fallbrook. For more information, call (760) 689-6200.

Lucette Moramarco can be reached by email at villageeditor@reedermedia.com.

San Diego Comic Fest addresses urban design in comics

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

Most comics take place in large cities: “Superman” is headquartered in Metropolis, “Batman and Robin” operate out of Gotham City and the actual New York City is used for “Spider-Man” and the “Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.”

There are exceptions. The “X-Men” are in a New York City suburb. “Jughead and Archie” are in a small town. Bruce Banner operates out of a university setting if his anger doesn’t bring “The Incredible Hulk” lead character into a more urban environment.

San Diego Comic Fest included a March 8 session “Urban Geography and Comics” which discussed the roles of city design in comics. San Diego City College urban geography instructor Lisa Chaddock led the panel and was joined by comics historians T.J. Shevlin and Ron Coleman.

“When you look at comics have you ever noticed it’s all in cities, cities or outer space?” Chaddock said.

The majority of comics, however, are set in places such as Metropolis, Gotham City and even formally New York City.

“I don’t think we often give the city as much credit as we need to,” Chaddock said.

Metropolis and Gotham City bear resemblance to New York City but are fictional. If an actual city is used more attention must be paid to details.

“You have to make sure your street is right,” Chaddock said.

Use of actual roads including highways leaves a comic book or movie vulnerable to inaccuracies – the town of Hill Valley in Back to the Future is at the intersection of U.S. Highway 6 and U.S. Highway 395, which is in Bishop, and Marty McFly and his parents grew up in a less mountainous place.

Shevlin said that an established real or fictional city can portray a lasting image.

“With Gotham it looks like it hasn’t left the 1930s,” he said. “It’s always easy to use Gotham or Metropolis because they’re the most easily explained.”

Chaddock grew up in the Fletcher Hills area of eastern San Diego County and graduated from Grossmont High School. She has seen San Diego County’s population grow from approximately 250,000 to approximately 4 million. Coleman is originally from Los Angeles and now lives in Oceanside.

“San Diego’s not a place that gets put in comics a lot,” Coleman said. “Probably a lot of it is the big publishing houses are in New York.”

Chaddock noted that a fictional city can appeal to readers who haven’t lived in an actual large metropolitan area.

“Part of the magic of comics is putting you in that place,” she said.

“What doesn’t get a lot of love as far as comic books go are small towns,” Shevlin said.

Shevlin said that a small town where a superhero was raised is an exception.

“Smallville, Kansas, is all about Superman,” Shevlin said. “It couldn’t be anywhere else but a small town.”

That is also the case for the Blue Valley, Nebraska, which is home to the Flash.

“Blue Valley loves that they have their own superhero,” Shevlin said.

The superheroes give the small towns recognition elsewhere.

“When they get a bit of it, it’s so important to them,” Shevlin said.

In the small towns, streets are used for parades to honor the superheroes. In the urban areas, streets are used for battles between superheroes and villains.

“Most things are happening on street level,” Chaddock said. “Your streets are the place that they happen. The superheroes tend to make a mess of the streets.”

Coleman said that a fictional company called Damage Control now cleans up cities when damage is caused by superheroes. His wife works for the city of San Diego’s parks department, and Coleman said that significant paperwork would be required to rebuild infrastructure damaged during superhero activity.

At the beginning of this century, Batman was absent from Gotham City for three months – not because he didn’t care about the damaged city but because Bruce Wayne was in Washington, lobbying for federal assistance to rebuild Gotham City.

The damage to cars and buildings impacts the citizens of a city with superheroes.

“For regular people, the insurance premiums you’re paying are through the roof because of that,” Shevlin said. “They left New York because they couldn’t afford it anymore and nothing was going on.”

Chaddock said that the destruction of a city’s area can benefit artistic liberty and can also allow for urban renewal without impacts to historical structures.

“Urban geographers have this term they call burdens of the past,” she said. “Sometimes people want to get rid of a city. They want to rebuild.”

Rebuilding cities destroyed during superhero activity allows fictional urban planners to make changes. The same can be said for those who plan scripts rather than municipal development.

“Artists look at this as an opportunity to do something different,” Chaddock said.

“I can see a writer wanting to wipe it out and start over,” Coleman said.

New York City and its surrounding area has multiple communities, so the X-Men can be in the suburbs while the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and Spider-Man can be in separate parts.

“You can easily do something like that,” Shevlin said.

Another urban geography term is “landscape of power,” and skyscrapers can portray this.

“The thing about a landscape of power is its authority,” Chaddock said.

Tall buildings often evoke thoughts of important occupants of the top floors such as the Gotham City police commissioner’s office or the Daily Planet editorial department. Tall buildings also allow superheroes to take action at the top of such structures – or even above the skyscrapers.

“Most comics have some element in them, but nobody does this better than Superman,” Chaddock said.

Urban infrastructure is enhanced by the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles utilizing the sewer system to travel.

Archie, Jughead and their friends live in Riverdale, which is a small town but not a rural one.

“It is a small town. It just has the feel, though, of density,” Chaddock said.

Superman and Batman precede the Interstate highway system. Destroying a freeway in Los Angeles would be one of the best ways to cause havoc in that city. The use of real highways in “Back to the Future” or elsewhere can restrict a fictional town to a specific area. Chaddock said freeways are underrepresented in comics for another reason.

“Freeways I don’t think have the character a lot of times. With streets you have character,” Chaddock said.

Structures are further away from a freeway than they are from streets. The streets of urban cities or smalltown village centers allow for more buildings.

“Our cities, if you think about it, are mostly set up in a grid,” Chaddock said.

That allows for a point of reference.

“Our suburbs tend to be windy streets,” Chaddock said. “You’re going to see the house and not much else going around that.”

Culver University in Willowdale is where Bruce Banner works in his capacity as a professor. A university campus is not gridded, but it has buildings.

“The university setting is another landscape of power,” Chaddock said.

That power comes from the knowledge from the universities.

“With Bruce Banner and with Spider-Man being involved in the research end of things, when you think about it we do attribute in the landscape an awful lot of specialness to schools,” Chaddock said. “Artists have always portrayed schools, universities, as places where things happen.”

Chaddock was an adjunct instructor at Cuyamaca College before taking a full-time position with San Diego City College.

Dogs enjoy their day at Bark in the Park

Madalyn Celene holds onto her dog Turner, an Australian cattle dog, at the annual Bark in the Park event at Live Oak Dog Park Saturday, March 23. During the event, dogs and their owners got to enjoy a beer garden, visit dozens of vendors of dog-themed items and demonstrations from trained dogs and dog trainers.

Pam Ultican holding Bosco, a Chihuahua mix, and Lilly Ames look at raffle items at the annual Bark in the Park event at Live Oak Dog Park. Dog owners and their pets participate in various dog contests including best tail wag, wackiest trick and owner look alike.

Park Ranger Christian Gonzales holds onto a red-tailed hawk during a demonstration of local birds of prey at the annual Bark in the Park event.

Adric Cook embraces his Pyrenees mix Carly, as she and other dogs are blessed during the blessing of the animals at the annual Bark in the Park event.

Dogs and their owners take a walk through the park Andrew Foulk photos at Live Oak Dog Park during the annual Bark in the Park event. During the walk, participants took an almost 1 mile path through the park, stopping at different landmarks.

Hungry, the golden retriever, sticks his tongue out at Live Oak Dog Park. As a puppy Hungry was the only survivor of his litter of 12, after his brothers and sisters caught a canine flu. His owners named him Hungry because of his constant desire to eat. Later, Hungry was attacked and had his lower mandible damaged, causing him to have a metal plate installed that keeps his jaw together, and because of this plate his mandible never fully grew, yet his tongue continued to grow at a normal rate.

Graceson Legg gets pulled by Stanley, a 3-month old miniature dachshund puppy, at the annual Bark in the Park event which raises money to maintain the Live Oak Dog Park.

Marylane Villa, dressed as a puppy, blows on her lollipop at the annual Bark in the Park event at Live Oak Dog Park which is a popular family event.

Medical examiner puts 20 years of data online

Yvette Urrea Moe
County of San Diego
Communications Office

Valuable comparisons and conclusions can be drawn from the types and circumstances of sudden unexpected deaths that occur in San Diego County, and in changes over time. Officials with the San Diego County Department of the Medical Examiner are releasing 22 years’ worth of data – from 1997 to the third quarter of 2018 – in a free searchable online portal. The site makes over 59,000 records available.

“We feel strongly that this information learned from the deaths that we’ve investigated can be used to help the living and even change lives for the better,” Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Glenn Wagner said. “Our vision is to be a data-forward agency. The idea is to make the data available for the public, media, other departments or agencies that may have some overlap with segments of the people included in the report, and researchers who may be able to look at the data and provide insights back to the Department of the Medical Examiner.”

The medical examiner does not investigate all deaths in San Diego county. Approximately 40 percent of all deaths are reported to the medical examiner, and of those more than 3,000 are brought in for an examination. In general, the medical examiner has jurisdiction for all accidental deaths, homicides, suicides, in-custody deaths and any sudden or unexpected natural deaths in which the decedent had not seen their health care provider in the last 20 days of life.

“The types of cases that fall under the medical examiner’s scope are of interest from both a public health and public safety aspect. The ability to compare San Diego statistics with other regional, state and national statistics is as important as a jurisdiction’s crime statistics,” Wagner said. “The data have implications for many agencies. Patterns and trends as reflected in this population as compared to the population as a whole, from public health and hospital and clinic information is important in terms of keeping your fingers on the pulse of the community.”

Making the data available for public searches has been an objective for the department for several years. Project managers studied how other jurisdictions locally and across the nation shared data to try to make the County’s data portal intuitive, responsive and easy to navigate. The data follows privacy guidelines that protect the deceased person and the person’s family, and so does not include names, dates of birth, case numbers or specific addresses.

The data are available in raw form and presented in some pre-assembled data sets such as opioid, fentanyl and suicide deaths, which are commonly requested by media outlets.

Thinking About Health

One more chance to look at options for Medicare or Medicare Advantage

Trudy Lieberman
Rural Health News Service

Solicitations for Medicare Advantage plans once again have been arriving in the mail, promising the best bargain since sliced bread. A case in point is one from Emblem Health, a managed care company in my area that said it considers me what they call a “candidate” for their “special needs plan.” I don’t qualify for such a plan.

The solicitation was interesting, though, for what it promised. Free transportation to and from doctor, hospital and lab appointments but only up to 24 one-way trips a year. It also promised “no referrals.” Did that mean no referrals were necessary to visit specialists? The solicitation didn’t say.

That seemed highly unusual for what I am assuming is a Medicare Advantage HMO. HMOs usually require consumers to obtain referrals to specialists.

But shoving aside the questionable advertising pitches such solicitations are known for, that one reminded me that beneficiaries are now in a special enrollment period until the end of March. The special enrollment period, which began Jan. 1, gives seniors a three-month window during which they can switch some of their Medicare arrangements.

It’s also a good time for those who will soon be turning 65 to begin thinking of their options and learn what the rules are once they make their selections.

Until the end of March, if someone has a Medicare Advantage plan, they are allowed to switch to another Medicare Advantage plan, or they can drop a Medicare Advantage plan, return to traditional Medicare and buy a Part D stand-alone drug benefit, Tricia Neuman, a senior vice president of the Kaiser Family Foundation and a Medicare expert, said.

What they cannot do if they have traditional Medicare along with a stand-alone drug plan is switch to a new drug benefit that might let them save more money on prescriptions. They can do that only during the open enrollment period in the fall.

Keep in mind that if someone drops a Medicare Advantage policy and switches to traditional Medicare, they might have trouble buying a Medigap policy to fill in holes in Medicare coverage. Only four states have what’s known as guaranteed issue Medigap insurance. In New York, Connecticut, Maine and Massachusetts, people dropping Medicare Advantage plans in favor of traditional coverage can buy a Medigap even if they have preexisting conditions. In other states, they may not be able to do it.

When might it be useful to consider other options during this brief window for switching?

If someone has a Medicare Advantage plan that has a drug benefit built in as part of the coverage but they believe they can do better with another plan’s drug benefit, then they might want to do the math and see if a switch helps the budget.

Too many consumers fail to do their shopping for the drug benefit when, in fact, they can save thousands of dollars in pharmaceutical expenses by choosing one plan over another.

This special enrollment period gives them a second chance to save on drug costs.

But they may want to switch Medicare Advantage plans or choose traditional coverage for other reasons that are becoming clearer. Research is beginning to surface that shows Medicare beneficiaries with high medical needs may have trouble accessing care in some Medicare Advantage plans.

Medicare defines those with high needs as people who have three or more chronic diseases and a functional limitation in activities of daily living or in performing routine daily tasks.

The U.S. Office of the Inspector General said last fall that those with Medicare Advantage plans sometimes had trouble getting claims paid under those plans, or they reported other problems getting help from the plan.

The Inspector General said that because so many seniors now have these plans, even low rates of inappropriately denied payments or services could cause “significant problems” for beneficiaries and their medical providers.

Just last month, new research reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association Internal Medicine found that Medicare beneficiaries with high medical needs and those eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid were much more likely to disenroll from Medicare Advantage plans than other beneficiaries.

Researchers at Brown and Columbia Universities found that disenrollment from MA plans “may indicate that plans do not meet the preferences of enrollees with significant chronic illness.”

This study and the Inspector General’s findings offer a cautionary tale for people who will be new to Medicare in the coming months and for sick beneficiaries in Medicare Advantage plans who may want to re-evaluate their options during this special open enrollment and next fall when open enrollment comes around again.

Flu activity in San Diego still elevated, mask requirement extended

Jose A. Alvarez
San Diego County Communications Office

The number of lab-confirmed flu cases went down again last week, and three additional influenza deaths were reported, the County Health and Human Services Agency announced.

A total of 508 influenza cases were reported last week, compared to the 574 the week before.

Also, three more San Diegans died from complications from the flu, bringing this season’s total to 49. In comparison, 307 San Diegans had died at the same time last year.

The three people who died were an 84-year-old man from San Diego, a 62-year-old woman from San Diego and a 50-year-old woman from East County. All three had underlying medical conditions.

“Influenza activity in the region is still elevated. People should continue taking precautions to avoid getting sick,” Dr. Wilma Wooten, county public health officer, said.

The number of people with influenza-like symptoms who showed up at local emergency departments went up one percentage point last week, reaching 6 percent again.

Due to continued elevated influenza activity in the county, Wooten is extending – until April 30 – the order for unvaccinated health care personnel to wear a mask while they’re in patient care areas. If influenza activity remains elevated, a further extension may be required.

The county Health and Human Services Agency publishes the weekly Influenza Watch report, which tracks key flu indicators and summarizes influenza surveillance in the region.

For the week ending March 16, the Influenza Watch report showed 7,184 total lab-confirmed cases to date, compared to 19,442 cases at this time last season.

People should do the following to avoid getting sick: wash hands thoroughly and often; use hand sanitizers; stay away from sick people; avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth; clean commonly touched surfaces and anyone who is sick should stay home and avoid contact with others.

Temecula Valley Hospital earns 5 Star Medicare Hospital Compare rating

Benefit from the silence

TEMECULA – Temecula Valley Hospital has earned a 5 Star Medicare Hospital Compare Rating, the highest rating from the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services for quality. Out of 4,573 hospitals, Temecula Valley Hospital’s 5 Star rating places the facility in the top 6 percent of the country.

“I am excited about the recognition of our 5 Stars on Hospital Compare,” Darlene Wetton, CEO of Temecula Valley Hospital said. “Quality, patient safety, and compassion are very important to our TVH team values. I am grateful to our staff and medical team for the excellent care that we provide to our community.”

Hospital Compare was created through the efforts of the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services. According to the Medicare Hospital Compare website, “The Hospital Compare rating summarizes up to 57 quality measures, reflecting common conditions that hospitals treat, such as heart attacks or pneumonia. The overall rating shows how well each hospital performed, on average, compared to other hospitals in the U.S. The Hospital Compare rating ranges from one to five stars. The more stars, the better a hospital performed on the available quality measures. The most common overall rating is 3 stars. The way that Hospital Compare calculates the star ratings is that survey information from one hospital is compared to that from others. More stars indicate better quality care than fewer stars.”

“This is truly a wonderful honor and a reflection of the exceptional providers that we have at TVH.” Dr. Pranav Kachhi, chief of staff for Temecula Valley Hospital, said.

For more information, visit the Medicare Hospital Compare website at www.medicare.gov/hospitalcompare.

Temecula Valley Hospital brings advanced technology, innovative programs, patient-centered and family sensitive care to area residents. The hospital features 140 private patient rooms; emergency care featuring ER Reserve; advanced cardiac and stroke care; orthopedics and general and surgical specialties. Temecula Valley Hospital is nationally recognized for patient safety by The Leapfrog Group, with a 2017 Top Hospital Award and five consecutive “A” grades for patient safety in fall 2018, spring 2018, fall 2017, spring 2017 and fall 2016. The hospital also recently received two 2019 Women’s Choice Award Achievements; One of America’s Best Hospitals for Patient Safety and One of America’s Best Stroke Centers, the American Heart Association/American Stroke Association’s Get With The Guidelines-Stroke Gold Plus Quality Achievement Award, The Joint Commission’s Gold Seal of Approval for Certification for hip and knee replacement, 5 Star Medicare Hospital Compare Rating, the American College of Cardiology Chest Pain Center with Primary PCI and Resuscitation Accreditation, the honor of the Inland Empire’s Top Workplaces 2017 and 2018, has been designated an Aetna Institute of Quality Cardiac Care Facility for comprehensive heart and vascular treatment, including cardiac medical intervention, cardiac rhythm programs and cardiac surgery. TIP volunteers add another dimension to the emergency response system: compassionate support.

Since 2014, the volume of the crisis team calls has increased by 60 percent. Tragedy does not discriminate, and the need for TIP services will continue to be there. In 2018, TIP responded to 1,199 scenes of tragedy, assisting 5,288 citizens in the community.

Specially trained citizen volunteers provide care and support to residents who have been traumatized by a personal tragedy or are in a state of crisis. Often survivors are alone, in shock and dismay following a sudden tragedy. TIP partners with fire, law enforcement, hospitals and the medical examiner to offers crisis intervention 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Volunteers are trained to respond to a variety of tragedies to offer support; house fires, natural death, drowning, sudden infant deaths, suicide, homicide and community disasters are a few examples.

TIP San Diego is continuing to seek skilled compassionate individuals who have an aspiration to give back to their community. Consider being a TIP volunteer today and sign up for an upcoming academy in your area. For more information, visit www.TIPSanDiego.org or call (855) 847-7343.

MUSTANGO

A Creative Writing and Art Journal by students from Maie Ellis Elementary

Un diario de escritura creativa y arte realizado por estudiantes de la Primaria Maie Ellis MUSTANGO is a creative writing and art journal by students from Maie Ellis Elementary, which is a dual immersion school that emphasizes a bilingual, biliterate and bicultural education. MUSTANGO is edited by the Maie Ellis PTSA.

In our first issue, we asked for general submissions AND submissions with the topic “Advice for my Parents.” It is interesting that parents often worry that their children are getting too much “screen time” on the computer or phone, but here we have a call out for parents to stop being “phone zombies,” to listen to their children and to take a deep breath. Sage advice and humor that we can all use in our busy daily lives!

We would like to thank the Village News for publishing MUSTANGO. ¡Gracias!

En nuestro primer número, solicitamos presentaciones generales Y presentaciones con el tema “Consejos para mis padres”. Es interesante que los padres a menudo se preocupen de que sus hijos tengan demasiado “tiempo de pantalla” en la computadora o

El Gato Lunchador

by David Garcia

Habia una vez un gato grandísimo negro y blanco que se llamaba El Gato Lunchador.

El Gato Lunchador era un ladrón y robó queso de los ratones. El corrió y corrió hasta que llegó al gallinero, y les pidió ayuda de las gallinas. Las gallinas votaron en su junta directiva y casi todas decidieron ir con el gato. Los Pollitos se quedaron en el gallinero. Las gallinas siguieron al Gato Lunchador y todos llegaron. El Gato Lunchador pensó y pensó... y el pensó en negociar así es como el resolvió su problema... ese es el fin.

Advice for parents

Have you ever wanted to give your parents some advice about their parenting? Parents, have you ever wondered why your kid does what he or she does? Well, in this article, you will read about some advice that I'd like to tell my parents and perhaps this article can be relatable to the advice that you want to tell your parents as well. Also, it talks about what your child does and why they do some of the things they do (not anything like a professional study, just some things that I notice most kids, and myself, doing sometimes).

Many years ago, before advanced technology, your parents had to go play outside and do outdoor activities. But since the glorious day that more advanced technology was made, our parents have become...PHONE ZOMBIES. Have you ever once just wished that your parents got off their phone, tablet, computer or iPad and paid you their needed and undivided attention? Well I definitely have. Because of this new exceptional machinery, I have to write this piece of advice to the phone zombies that we call parents: Spend more time with your kids, not your cell phone!

Some other advice for parents is to be understanding when you're having an argument. Let your kids talk, hear them out and then say what you think is necessary to say. When your parents were your age (believe it or not they were your age once) they were as sassy and back talked just as much as you do. They wanted their parents to hear them out, but they just wouldn't. So, being grounded time after time, year after year, they said they would never do that to their children... but look at what is happening right now. Parents, do you remember being locked in your room and the sadness overtaking you, do you want the same for your child? Most likely, no, because of your terrible experience. Hear your kids out and, depending on what they did, take into consideration their punishment and choose the less merciless route.

My last bit of advice is for YOU students! You need to make the effort to help your parents out. They do a lot for you. Sometimes all you have to do for them is say, "Thank you." If you want to go the extra mile to say thank you, help out around the house, maybe make a simple easy dinner for your parents, make them comfortable when they come home and last but not least, try and do something special like paint them a picture, draw them a picture, make a collage, do whatever you want to do to make them feel appreciated because you and me both know that they deserve it.

That's some advice from you to me I hope you enjoyed my advice for your parents with a bonus paragraph about kids being more appreciative of their parents. Again, I hope you enjoyed my article. Thank you for your time and opportunity.

if I could give advice to parents
I would say let your kids do it parents think they're perfect so

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF ROSA LYDIA CANNELLA aka ROSA L. CANNELLA aka ROSA CANNELLA aka ROSE CANNELLA
CASE NO. 37-2019-00012870-PR-LA-CTL

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of: ROSA LYDIA CANNELLA aka ROSA L. CANNELLA aka ROSA CANNELLA aka ROSE CANNELLA

A Petition for Probate has been filed by SARAH CANNELLA and ANDREANA CANNELLA in the Superior Court of California, County of SAN DIEGO

The Petition for Probate requests that SARAH CANNELLA and ANDREANA CANNELLA be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:
Date: 5/7/2019 Time: 11:00 a.m. Dept. 504
Address of court: 1100 Union Street, San Diego, CA 92101, New Central Courthouse-Probate

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Santa Margarita Ecological Reserve is critical corridor for wildlife habitat

Staff Writer

Reserve manager Pablo Bryant points to a series of yellow dots that run along a patchwork of green on a map detailing the bounds of Temecula’s Santa Margarita Ecological Reserve.

The dots represent the tracked movement of mountain lions who use the river valley as a corridor for their habitat.

The Santa Margarita River is southern California’s last free-flowing river.

The reserve spans the first 5 miles of the river, which Bryant said is one of the most critical corridors for wildlife and habitat biodiversity.

“We connect the Palomar Mountains to the East and Santa Ana Mountain to the West for wildlife. Wildlife and animals use the river valley as a highway,” he said.

The nearly 5,000-acre reserve is managed by San Diego State University’s College of Sciences and field stations program for the purpose of research and education.

The public was invited onto the limited-access reserve in observance of World Water Day Saturday, March 23. Held annually March 22, the United Nations-backed day highlights the importance and conservation of freshwater around the world.

As part of their coursework, a group of San Diego State University Public Relations students organized Saturday’s event, “SMER Spring Splash,” which took place from noon to 3 p.m. as a way to bridge understanding between the reserve and the local community.

Journalism student Sam Kaye, 27, said many people don’t realize that access to the Santa Margarita Ecological Reserve is limited to the public or the reasons why.

“Our goal is to let the public know the reserve is a place to learn from and protect and hopefully we will foster a new community of environmental stewards,” Vivian Lam, a 21-year-old SDSU senior and public relations student, said.

As the population in Temecula Valley grows, more people are interested in exploring natural areas. But locals may not realize the reserve is largely off limits except by way of docent-led hikes.

Increased interest has led to more cases of trespassing, pollution and vandalism, Bryant said.

“We want to help satisfy the public’s desire to be out here, but do it in a way that doesn’t negatively impact our mission. We want to be able to educate people from a conservation standpoint,” he said.

Unfortunately, he said, most of the problems are concentrated at the most critical part of the reserve: at the confluence of Santa Margarita River where the Murrieta and Temecula Creeks collide.

No trespassing signs haven’t stopped people from swimming in the river or tagging rocks with graffiti.

Bryant is worried about the negative impact to the reserve, he said.

“It’s a huge problem. Up until about seven years ago, we were geographically hidden,” he said. “We want to make sure people are not in the way of wildlife.”

Bryant has a close connection with the land, which San Diego

State University acquired in 1962. He’s been working on it for almost 20 years and has served as reserve manager since 2010.

His idea is to host more public events to help raise awareness and mitigate trespassing and illegal use. This year, volunteers have led 18 public hikes on the reserve.

The Santa Margarita river area is protected and conserved for many reasons.

In addition to its cultural significance as the birthplace of the Pechanga band of Luiseño Mission Indians, the area is a means for biological diversity and ecological balance.

“It’s the important piece between two habitats,” Bryant said.

A huge barrier for wildlife is Interstate 15.

So far, the reserve has lost four mountain lions to oncoming traffic.

The latest occurred Dec. 26, when a dead mountain lion was picked up off the freeway, most likely hit by early dawn traffic.

“We are really worried about the populations of mountain lions,” Bryant said.

He estimated there to be 20 lions roaming the Santa Ana mountains.

Bryant said the mountain lions they are losing are dispersing males, who are pressured out of their packs by more dominant lions.

“There’s a huge pressure for the lions to find new habitat,” Bryant, who earned his bachelor’s degree in biology from SDSU, said. In order to combat more deaths, he said the reserve is looking for ways to improve habitat connection.

“We want the species to be as viable as possible and be able to introduce new genetic material in and out of the area,” he said.

Santa Margarita’s headwaters are also being considered as an option to reintroduce native Steelhead trout.

The land that makes up the Santa Margarita Ecological Reserve was first purchased by Murray Schloss in the 1920s, before he granted it to San Diego State University.

It is now made up of a patchwork of private, public and agency lands set aside for conservation.

SDSU manages the reserve’s field stations for research, education and the preservation of native habitat and biodiversity.

“The unique landscape they have here provides opportunities for researchers and students to study this area,” student volunteer Kaye said.

A handful of students volunteered their time Saturday to help make the event a success. About 15 to 20 adults and children arrived to take the guided hike down to the river. Community members also participated in interactive projects such as water testing in the river and painting stones.

Chloe Kangas, 23, and her boyfriend Antonio Gutierrez, 24, are both SDSU students.

They came to Santa Margarita Ecological Reserve’s World Water Day event to see what the reserve is all about.

“We heard it’s the last free-flowing river in southern California, so we wanted to check it out,” Kangas said.

The importance of priority

Amelia Smith is a Realtor with Pacific Sothebys International in Fallbrook.

Amelia Smith, Realtor
Special to Village News

The spring real estate selling season is here, and according to statistics, those considering selling their home this season have been thinking about it for months. Some sellers have begun the process without first consulting a Realtor, while others choose to form a deep partnership long before a listing agreement is signed.

Most sellers cite maximizing profits as their primary goal and timing of the sale is second to that goal. Profit is important because most people are planning to purchase another home. But, when the imperative is a new baby, job transfer, retirement or other life-changing event, the timing can become critical.

In my experience, the top preparations sellers make on their own are home improvements and setting pricing goals. I personally have never represented a seller who had a pre-sale home inspection, but some do. It's rare for a home seller to have done nothing. Once a home has attracted a buyer, there are usually concessions made by the seller to bring a transaction to a successful close. Most often I see sellers make reasonable repairs, provide a termite completion certificate or offer a credit through escrow in lieu of repairs. It has become more common for the washer and dryer to be requested by the buyer or exchanged by the seller for another requested buyer concession. It is often easier to leave those appliances than it is to move them.

Unfortunately, it is not as uncommon as everyone would like for escrows to cancel. I have read reports that said as many as 41 percent of offers cancel and do not close successfully. There are almost always changes made to the original, accepted purchase contract. Time frames are extended, closing dates shortened or pushed back. Sometimes additional buyers are added.

There are commonly changes made during the listing period as well. A majority of home sellers reduce their price once with a third of sellers making price adjustments three times before their homes sell.

What I find is most expected of me, as an agent, is simply that I bring the buyer.

Additionally, sellers appreciate the complexity of today's real estate climate and want me to handle the paperwork nitty-gritty, sales promotion, scheduling, vendors and escrow to provide a transaction that is as stress-free as possible. Prioritizing all the moving parts is one of my most important responsibilities, and efficient communication that occurs consistently from the first encounter to the closed sale and beyond is the most important tool to accomplishing it.

If you are in the consideration and planning stages of selling a home, reach out for input, regardless of when the sale happens. Understanding the steps may help homeowners prioritize their presale considerations.

Real Estate Round-Up: Proposition 13 is under attack

Kim Murphy
Murphy & Murphy Southern California Real Estate

What exactly is the "California Schools and Local Communities Funding Act of 2018?" It sounds like it has something to do with financially supporting our communities and schools through a bond or statewide ballot initiative.

The initiative is another money grab, compliments of Sacramento that entices our support by laying the benefit at the feet of our schools, and who wouldn't want to support schools?

The title was a real bait and switch and was circulated last fall to gather signatures to qualify it for the November 2020 election. Due largely to the misleading title, it was overwhelmingly supported, because, after all, who doesn't want to support schools and communities? Believe it or not, this funding act was an attack on Proposition 13, but who'd have ever guessed that?

Schools are a priority in California. Over 50 percent of the 2019 state budget goes to schools, K-12 and higher education combined. The problem is that much of those funds don't make it to the classroom.

Over half of the school budget goes toward pensions. What's left over equates to a little over $10,000 per student and ranks California at No. 41 out of the 50 states and Washington at the K-12 level. Student performance at the K-12 level ranks next to last, with only Alaska doing worse. Florida, another state full of immigrants ranks No. 1, tied with Wyoming. Knowing these statistics provides an interesting perspective regarding the need for additional funding for schools.

Whether or not residents believe that our schools should have more funding is debatable. Whether schools would receive additional funds on top of the current budget for schools is not spelled out, so this bill could simply become another way for Sacramento to raise taxes for the general fund. But the title of the funding act is deceptive at best.

The accurate title should have been "Amendment to Proposition 13." That would have made homeowner's ears perk up. After all, Proposition 13 is the holy grail in California. We don't have many tax breaks, but Proposition 13 makes all the other taxes property owners pay a little less painful when balanced with the savings we receive from Proposition 13 and the controls it has on increases to property taxes in California.

This act would tax commercial properties differently and separately from residential. Another name for this type of tax is split roll. This initiative would amend the state constitution to allow commercial and industrial properties and vacant land not intended for housing or used for farming to be taxed based on their current assessed market values.

The initiative would exempt from market-value assessment property used by the owner to run a business provided that "the total fair market value of all property owned by the taxpayer in the state in which the business operates is less than $2 million." The measure would also exempt from property tax $500,000 of the value of a business's personal property and all personal property owned by businesses with less than 50 employees.

The tax on these types of properties could be re-assessed yearly and at the point of sale. If the tax assessor felt that the property held higher value than the purchase price or had increased in value over the previous year, it could be assessed higher than what the buyer paid for it and assessed more than the 2 percent per year that currently exists. There is no yearly cap to the assessment. It has the potential to be a runaway train when it comes to how much taxes could be collected.

It should come as no surprise that the California Federation of Teachers and the League of Women Voters support this initiative. Their argument is that the state has been giving away billions of dollars in tax breaks to millionaires, billionaires and big corporations. They want the projected $6.5 to $10.5 billion in additional revenue.

The opponents argue that this initiative would adversely impact the cost of doing business in the state and result in higher prices on the end product as well as reduced employment. They also argue that it could have unintended consequences for small businesses, many of which lease property from large business owners. After all, the owners will be forced to pass on the additional carrying cost of the building.

The opponents, largely supported by the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association, have previously highlighted a loophole in the current tax assessment that allows larger property owners to "breakup" sales of property through various limited liability companies and partnerships so that a single owner never takes over a majority of the property, which allows the property to not be reassessed. They suggested "fixing" this loophole which would generate additional funding without hurting every commercial building owner.

One final concern is that approving this initiative is a little like putting the camel's nose under the tent. It starts with his nose, then it's his head and then the whole body. There's no turning back. How long would it be until residential properties became the next target? Stay tuned for updates on this initiative.

November 2020 seems far in the future, but make no mistake, this initiative will have financial consequences that will impact businesses, tenants who lease commercial buildings, employment and the overall economy of California far beyond 2020.

Genetics conference includes insect farming session

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

Insect farming can produce bugs that are used not only for human cuisine but also for livestock feed, pharmaceuticals, vaccines, vitamins and other uses. The International Conference on the Status of Plant and Animal Genome Research which is held annually at the Town and Country Hotel in San Diego has sessions on genetic research to improve breeding yield, disease and parasite resistance and flavor, and the 2019 PAG conference, Jan. 12-16, included the Jan. 16 Farmed Insects to Feed Future Populations workshop.

All About Bugs founder and president Aaron Dossey led the workshop and also gave a presentation titled “Development of Insects for Food, Feed, Pharma and other Valuable Applications.” Beta Hatch founder and CEO Virginia Emery was the speaker for “The Genetics and Microbiome of Tenebrio molitor, an Insect Bred for Animal Feed.” Tenebrio molitor is a beetle which is a mealworm in its larval stage. Marce Lorenzen of North Carolina State University addressed her Tribolium red flour beetle research in “Lessons from Tribolium: Transferring Genetic Technologies to other Coleoptera.” The CRISPR genetic modification technique was the focus of “CRISPR-Cas9 in the Mealworm Tenebrio molitor for Improvement as a Crop,” which was discussed by Clay Chu of All Things Bugs.

“Like anything we can aspire to make them better,” Dossey said. “We think we can make them better.”

The breeding objectives goals of the genome research include faster developmental time, increased mass and more offspring.

“We probably want to work closely with farmers,” Dossey said.

On the scientific end the future work includes genetic sequencing and identification of diseases which could threaten insect farming operations.

More than 50 companies in North America and 80 in Europe offer food products with insects as a key ingredient.

“The industry is growing,” Emery said. “We see an emerging opportunity.”

Some insects are grown at Pacific Animal Productions in Fallbrook. Pacific Animal Productions provides the edible insects exhibit at the San Diego County Fair.

“It’s amazing that San Diego has embraced it,” Karla Majewski, who is the owner of Pacific Animal Productions and the curator of the edible insects exhibit, said.

Because most insect farms are indoors, if not in outdoor enclosed areas, such restrictions as climate and terrain are not factors.

“Insects can be grown virtually anywhere,” Emery said.

Dossey added that the farming of insects is not limited to the ground level.

“You can go vertical,” he said.

Emery added that bacterial contamination of food nutrients can be broken down by insects.

“That’s real exciting to me that it’s not just a futuristic idea,” Majewski said.

The breeding program development research Beta Hatch has performed on the yellow mealworm investigated phenotypes or the observable traits and their heritability, genotypes or the genetic makeup of 13 strains sourced from farms around the United States and sequences from the microbiome of mealworms feeding on several feedstocks. Microbiomes are micro-organisms in a specific environment; the research included whether microbiomes change with the strain of mealworm or with a different diet for the mealworm.

“Breeding performance is the main trait as far as the larvae we’re interested in,” Emery said.

“Animal feed is a cornerstone of the food supply chain and yet there’s a lot of need for some change,” Emery said. “We have been working to develop a process that is reliable and affordable and efficient.”

The mealworm is Beta Hatch’s first crop.

“They’re a superbug. You can grow them year-round virtually anywhere,” Emery said. “We don’t need to give them direct water for them to be able to grow.”

Farming of insects includes the egg, larva, pupa and adult life-cycle.

“The cultivation can get quite complex,” Emery said.

That lifecycle also includes the genetic and other research being performed.

“We need to look at the whole lifecycle,” Emery said.

Seventeen key performance indicators were used for the Beta Hatch research. Beta Hatch found that one strain of mealworm could be produced for 55 percent less cost than other strains on the market.

“It’s a really exciting time for the industry,” Emery said. “It’s kind of a Wild West. There’s a lot of work to do.”

Tribolium castaneum, or the red flour beetle, was the first beetle to be sequenced. Lorenzen has been working on Tribolium genetics since the 1990s. She now expects red flour beetles to be on the market within two years in the absence of regulatory hurdles.

“Over the last year we’ve made enormous progress,” she said.

The current genetic modification activity involves the mealworm’s eye color, which does not affect its health.

“I thought that was pretty interesting,” Majewski said. She did not attend the PAG conference but was informed of the session.

“I think any insect talk is good, and it’s going to attract interest,” Dossey said.

Dossey said that insect farming not only helps the food supply but also the security of farmers.

“Insects I think are very secure because they are very prolific,” he said. “You can switch to an entirely different insect and be right back up and running.”

Insects are human cuisine in approximately 180 countries.

“We’re one of them that’s a holdout,” Majewski said.

Pacific Animal Productions provides its edible insect exhibit, including live insects and non-insect bugs, at between 15 and 20 locations throughout the United States on an annual basis. The edible insect exhibit is in the California Grown barn at the San Diego County Fair and will return to this year’s fair which will begin May 31 and conclude July 4.

County approves easement vacation for unbuilt Via Encinos-Palomar Drive

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

A parcel map for a Fallbrook subdivision was recorded in May 1987 that included a proposed road north of where La Canada Road and Linda Vista Drive merge. The road was to have been called Via Encinos-Palomar Drive and was also known as Select Collector 130 because of its planned status as a collector road on what San Diego County called its Circulation Element. An Offer of Dedication was made, and although the county never accepted that dedication, the easement remained.

The easement was vacated following a 5-0 San Diego County Board of Supervisors vote Feb. 27. The easement removal takes away the encumbrance upon the property.

The Offer of Dedication included an easement for road purposes along with the right for the county to extend and maintain drainage facilities, embankment slopes and excavation beyond the limits of the public road. The easement area totals approximately 29,708 square feet.

Select Collector 130 was to have run from Mission Road on the west to Gird Road on the east. Most of SC 130 west and southeast of the Offer of Dedication area has been constructed as Via Encinos, Linda Vista Drive and Knottwood Way. The 2011 update of the county’s general plan removed the part of SC 130 which had an Offer of Dedication along with adjoining portions from the Mobility Element, and that once-planned roadway is not part of the county’s five-year Capital Improvement Plan. An Offer of Dedication is usually not accepted by the county until the road is actually constructed.

In addition to being deemed excess right of way no longer needed for street or highway purposes, there are no utility facilities in use which would be affected by the easement vacation, no property owner would be landlocked if the area was not used for a roadway and no community trails or pathways are planned for the area so the county’s Department of Parks and Recreation determined that the easement area is not needed for trail purposes.

California poppies in full bloom

This Escholtzia californica is found in Temescal Canyon near Lake Elsinore.

Many different colors of poppy hybrids grow in home gardens.

Roger Boddaert photos A riot of poppy colors are seen in a Fallbrook garden and cultivars.

Roger Boddaert
Special to the Village News

What is more glorious and brings the warm feeling that spring is around the corner than our native blooming poppies that are sprinkled throughout the golden state of California?
The genus of plants was named for Johann Friedrich Eschscholtz in the 1800s, and the species is from California.

It was in the late 1880s that the California State Floral Society voted to select a state flower. There were three candidates on the ballot with; Matillija, Calochortus and the California poppy, which won by a landslide and gave the name the Golden State due to the orange-colored poppy flowers.

It is said that the early Spanish explorers called the plant “Copa de Oro” which means ‘cup of gold’ as they viewed the vibrant and brilliant orange flowers on the coastal slopes from their exploratory sailing ships anchored just offshore.
The California poppy has been used by Native Americans both for food and medicine. Some groups boiled or steamed the plants to be eaten as a green vegetable. Other indigenous peoples use the California poppy to treat toothaches, headaches and as a sedative for babies.
In the movie “Wizard of Oz,” Dorothy and friends fell asleep in a field of poppies, a reference to their real-life sedative properties that natives already knew and used as a medicine long before Hollywood got the message.
When these tiny little seeds erupt on the hillsides, the desert, the rolling slopes and valleys from the coastal plains and up mountain sides, residents can see one of the true miracles of nature in the equinox of spring. The early fall and winter rains this year have brought about a bounty of wildflowers not seen in such profusion for years.

It is said that because the region has gone through such a long drought cycle, the invasive yellow mustard did not compete this year and that is why the native flowers have been able to be so outstanding.
The poppy family’s color spectrum covers the rainbow in hues and tints, not just orange.
One of the petite poppies is the yellow form called Eschscholtzia minutiflora, and it’s a real charmer out in a rock garden setting and grows to about 6 inches in height.
Some of the new hybridized poppy flowers have fanciful names like Orange Chiffon, Red Chief, White Linen, Purple Glean, Ivory Castle and more. These cultivars are available from a number of seed catalogs, so get ready next fall and give these unique colors a place in the spring garden setting.

The time to sow seeds is traditionally in fall, just before winter rains, so order seeds early and paint the garden with colorful poppies. Poppies enjoy full sunshine from zones of 1-10 which is an incredible range for any plant species located in California, Nevada, Arizona and up into Utah.
When poppies become pollinated by bees or other meandering insects, the seed heads will develop late in the season and, bingo, they pop out next season’s seeds with precise horticultural timing resting in their dormant state till next year.
“Lose yourself in nature and find inner peace.”
To tour Lake Elsinore’s poppy bloom, the city has tour buses leaving from the dirt parking lot on Nichols Road to the south and the Lake Elsinore Premium Outlets to the north. Cost for the shuttle, which is the only way to access the poppy bloom on the weekends, is $10 per person with children under the age of 3 free. Wait times for the shuttle buses can exceed an hour on weekends.

Fallbrook Encore adds new activities

FALLBROOK – The Fallbrook Encore Club is a social club which encourages friendships and fun. Members are drawn from Rainbow, DeLuz, Bonsall and Fallbrook. Each month they can choose to participate in a wide variety of activities, including several new ones.

Many ladies gathered for the regular monthly salad bar luncheon, enjoying dishes brought by their friends and participating in a quick game with prizes. Another group chose to attend the Lawrence Welk Theatre production of “Menopause.”

The gardening group, “Happy Diggers,” were recent guests of Obra Verde Growers in Valley Center. They grow of beautiful and sometimes rare drought-tolerant ornamentals. They ship to many well-known nurseries and gardens across the country and work with growers around the world. The owners, Joe and Julie Walker, made everyone welcome. They gave a presentation on the growing process followed by a tour of the facility that is almost in Fallbrook’s backyard.

“GO” is a new activity at the Fallbrook Encore Club. It involves being out and about doing something different each month, that is planned and presented by a different host. The first GO event was creating fused glass art objects in the host’s home. The April GO event will be “Treasures of Fallbrook,” a walking tour of select stores in downtown Fallbrook. The merchants will be expecting the group and will offer them a treasure hunt, helping everyone get to know them and their merchandise. Future GO events will include a visit to San Juan Capistrano in May, with more activities planned for the summer.

The RV club visits Tucson, Arizona, April 7-13, and the Spring Luncheon is held April 18, as guests of Fallbrook Newcomers Club, with the theme “a Little Bit of Country, a Little Bit of Rock and Roll.” Next up is the Sock Hop at the Mission Theatre, April 24, and the Newcore Art Show for members of both Encore and Newcomers Clubs, April 28.

Encore meets the first Tuesday of each month at the United Methodist Church, 1844 Winterhaven Road, in Fallbrook. Social time with coffee and treats begins at 9:30 a.m., followed by the meeting at 10 a.m. The next meeting will be April 2 and will feature the Fallbrook Beautification Alliance, with Marta Donovan as guest speaker and Heather Howard from the Fallbrook Merchants.

Those interested in more information about the club are welcome to attend the coffee and get acquainted, or contact either membership chair, Bea Valverde at beatricevalverde62@yahoo.com or Bobbi Bixby at (562) 673-1250. The website is www.fallbrookencoreclub.com.

Hensley wins Best Blues Artist award

Joe Naiman Village News Correspondent

On April 13 Casey Hensley will sing at the Fallbrook Live concert at Pala Mesa, her first Fallbrook performance since she won the Best Blues Artist honor at the San Diego Music Awards.

The San Diego Music Awards were presented March 11 at the House of Blues in San Diego. Hensley has previously been nominated, but this year’s San Diego Music Award is her first.

“It was awesome,” Hensley said. “The San Diego Music Awards is always great. I’m glad to just hang out with everybody, and it was awesome to perform.”

Hensley also had the distinction of taking home the Best Blues Artist award at the House of Blues. “That was so cool. That’s the best place to win it,” she said.

Fan voting – including by other musicians – determines the award winners after the San Diego Music Academy selects the nominees. “It’s great to be recognized by your peers and be voted for by your fans,” Hensley said. “A lot of my friends won, too, so it was super fun.”

The awards ceremony includes performances by the nominees. “We had a great performance,” Hensley said.

Hensley was joined by guitarists Anthony Cullins (who is still called the Fallbrook Kid even though he is now 18) and Jimmy Zollo, keyboardist Jody Bagley, bassist Mark Campbell, and drummer Evan Caleb Yearsley. “It’s a team effort. Without them I can’t do what I do,” Hensley said.

Hensley and her musicians performed two songs. Both are from her upcoming album, which has not yet been titled. “I thought why not do something new?” she said.

The first song, “Good As Gone,” had never previously been performed. “It went over I thought beautifully. I think everybody really liked it,” Hensley said.

The other song, “You Should Be So Lucky,” was previously performed and is also on the upcoming album.

“Having everybody there I kind of wanted to see how it was received,” Hensley said. “I thought it was the perfect place to do something with the new record.”

The album is being recorded at Jason Mraz’s studio in Fallbrook and Jeff Berkeley is the engineer. Both were present at the San Diego Music Awards. “It was special to do the new songs with them there,” Hensley said.

“It was an honor to play that event,” Cullins said. “It was just cool to be able to be at an event like that.”

“I think it went over great,” Hensley said.

Hensley, who is now 26, was nominated for Artist of the Year in 2018 and was nominated for Best New Artist in 2017. In October 2017, her album “Casey Hensley Live (Featuring Laura Chavez)” was released.

“We’ve been having a great time,” Hensley said. “Thank

Boys & Girls Club help clean up Fallbrook

FALLBROOK – Members of the Boys & Girls Clubs of North County spent their afternoon Tuesday, March 19, on Main Avenue working to beautify the streets of Fallbrook. With gloves, brooms and trash bags in hand, they picked up every piece of trash in sight.

Club members also used the time to deliver decorative tins with candies to businesses downtown, who have supported the Boys & Girls Clubs of North County, as a thank you and to invite them to join the club for their Boys & Girls Club week. Boys & Girls Club week which kicks off April 8 and is an opportunity for the community to visit and see for themselves all the fun that happens every day at the club.

“For a whole week we open our doors to celebrate our amazing staff and club members, and to share some of the excitement that happens here,” Allison Barclay, the CEO of the Boys & Girls Clubs of North County, said. “We invite everyone in the community to join us at our Open House April 8, starting at 4 p.m. to help us kick off our Boys & Girls Club week.”

In addition to their Open House, the club will also host an art exhibit Tuesday, April 9, with each entry created by a club member. Club members will be participating in a healthy cooking challenge, April 10, where they will test their cooking skills as they make custom pancakes. Parents and friends are invited April 11, to come and cheer on members as they participate in the club’s talent showcase. The festivities conclude Friday with a barbecue and dodgeball tournament.

For more information on the Open House or other events during Boys & Girls Club week, call (760) 728-5871.

The mission of Boys & Girls Clubs of North County is “to inspire and enable all young people, especially those that need us most, to realize their full potential as productive, responsible and caring citizens.” Their mission is carried out each day in our Ingold Clubhouse, four school sites in Fallbrook and one school site in Rainbow. Rotarians honor elementary Students of the Month

FALLBROOK – William H. Frazier Elementary School Principal Arica Rainey presented two Students of the Month to the Rotary Club of Fallbrook at their weekly luncheon.

Tyler Tanner is a sixth-grade student who is an active member of the Sharing Our Acceptance and Respect team. Through participation in this program, Tyler works with special needs students, supporting their learning. Additionally, Tyler works with other students to help them be more successful and to make Frazier a better school.

Maliah Yokum is also a sixth-grade student and enjoys supporting special needs students through the SOAR program. Maliah is active in Girl Scouts. She enjoys camping, hiking and providing community service such as flag raising at the Del Mar Fair.

Additionally, San Onofre School Principal Lillian Perez presented

Valentina Ugalde, fourth-grade student, as Student of the Month. Valentina shared how education and the eight habits of “The Leader in Me” program relate to one another.

She and other students go to school to learn about subjects, about themselves and how to live a balanced life, she said; it’s “Sharpening the Saw.” Students also learn how to become kind, fair and understanding, she said, which is similar to the habit of “Thinking Win-Win.” Valentina said she values her education and becoming a leader.

The Student of the Month program is part of an ongoing effort by the Rotary Club of Fallbrook to encourage and reward student excellence and achievement. For more information, visit www.fallbrookrotary.org.

DAR members help children celebrate Dr. Seuss’ birthday

FALLBROOK – In the first week of March, Daughters of the American Revolution, Luiseno Chapter members Anna Anderson, Cindy Greer and Bonnie Hayosh along with Riverside County Supervisor Chuck Washington assisted different venues to celebrate Dr. Seuss’ birthday.

Cindy Greer of Fallbrook met with Christ the King Preschool in Fallbrook and spoke to preschoolers about the author before reading “Happy Birthday to You!” Her granddaughter and the other children joined Greer in wishing Dr. Seuss a happy birthday by snacking on chocolate mint ice cream and blueberries.

Then March 6, Greer read the same titled book to Teresa Karl’s first-grade students at Fallbrook STEM Academy. The students enjoyed the rhyming text, and Greer encouraged their participation. She gave each child a coloring page to complete featuring the Cat in the Hat.

Anna Anderson of Hemet read Dr. Seuss’ “Happy Birthday to You!” to two classrooms – one at Crowne Hill Elementary in Temecula and the other at Temecula International Academy. Both sites received a copy of the book for their libraries.

Washington dressed up for the Ronald H. Roberts Temecula Public Library’s “Seussapalooza” event Friday, March 1. He read Seuss’ “Happy Birthday to You!” to those attending that celebration and donated the book – a gift from DAR Luiseno – to the library.

All of the Dr. Seuss books were donated to each school’s library by the Luiseno Chapter’s Literacy Committee chaired by DAR member Bonnie Hayosh of Winchester. The Luiseno Chapter promotes literacy as

The newly formed team started their rigorous training four months ago, and in only their second competition testing their mettle, the team took three first place awards and placed second overall out of 22 teams.

The competition, called the Battle at Bandini, was held Feb. 23, at U.S. Marine Corps Base 29 Palms. The competition was open to JROTC units from every branch of service across multiple states.

Raiders competition events are each uniquely challenging – akin to a military team version of the “American Ninja Warrior” television show. Every event course is not only physically challenging but mentally challenging because teams have a cognitive challenge at the end of the course which they have to solve as a team.

Battle at Bandini featured 11 separate and unique obstacle course events that tested different skill sets. Fallbrook’s JROTC Raiders placed first in the strength course, first in the obstacle course, first in the movement to contact course and second place in the overall competition.

Each event first place gave the Raiders a Shield of Honor award. For their overall second place finish, the cadets were presented a Spartan Warrior’s Helmet.

The team began when Cadet 1st Sgt. John Regan moved to Fallbrook High this year from a high school that had a Raider team that he participated in. On finding out his new unit did not have a Raider team, Regan approached Lt. Col. Wade, the senior Marine instructor for the program, about starting one.

“This program is all about leadership,” Wade said to him. “If you’re willing to put in the work to start and lead the team, of course we will make it happen.”

The new student set out to recruit other cadets to take on the challenge. He found 23 other cadets who were willing to train before and after school as well as on weekends while maintaining their academic studies.

The cadets work as a team and train together to accomplish challenging physical tasks such as running with combat loads, strength and endurance challenges, rope climbing, navigating and negotiating and overcoming obstacles.

“It was great moment for the team. The leadership, dedication and camaraderie these students have really showed at this event,” Master Sgt. Brian Richardson, Fallbrook Marine instructor, said. “We are here to guide and support these students, but they have really taken on the mantle of leadership every step of the way since FHS began the Marine Corps JROTC almost three years ago. Our community can be so proud. Our cadets across the board have excelled and are getting noticed nationally in multiple areas.”

Athlete of the Week

Murray a motivator for Warriors track and field

Jeff Pack
Writer

In her first four dual meets of the 2019 track and field season and at the Bronco Invitational, nobody could catch Fallbrook High School junior Erin Murray in the 400 meters.

It's not likely that many runners will this season.

The three-year varsity letterman was nominated by coach Marco Arias for Athlete of the Week not only because she hasn't been caught, but because "she leads both by example and by motivating others to do their best in all that they do."

Sure, she entered the 2019 season as the back-to-back Valley League Champion in the 400 meter race, but Arias said he was just as impressed with her work ethic.

"She is a coach's dream," he said. "She not only runs the workouts that are put in front of her, but she really attacks them as if she was competing in an actual race. She is always looking for anything to make her better as a runner and is positive with all her teammates. She looks after and mentors the younger athletes and really shows what a captain of a team should be."

Murray, who also plays field hockey, placed sixth in the 400 meter at last year's San Diego CIF finals, something of which she is very proud.

"I was running against the best in San Diego," she said. "I ran a great time and was ecstatic about my results."

Murray also runs 200 meter, 4x100 meter relay and 4x400 meter relay for the Warriors, and she has lofty goals for the team and for herself in 2019.

"My goal for the team this season is to win the league and for our 4x100 team to go to CIF," she said. "My personal goal for the season is to break 56 seconds in the 400 meter and go to state."

When asked what her favorite accomplishment is a member of the Warriors track and field team, she said, "When our 4 by 100 team won first place in the first race of our season a few weeks ago. It was the first time all four of us ran together, and the win set everyone up for a great season."

Even before she got to high school, Murray knew she enjoyed running, especially timed runs.

"When I was in junior high, we had weekly runs in PE class," she said. "Every week I would try to improve my time from the last week, and that's when I realized I enjoyed running and competing in races. When I got to high school, I knew I wanted to continue running so I decided to join track and field."

Even though most of the events in track and field are individual, it's the team that aspect of the sport that Murray said she enjoys most.

"I love this sport because of the sense of camaraderie among the teammates," she said. "Everyone gets along so well with each other and is so supportive no matter the event. Besides the team aspect, I love the sense of accomplishment and adrenaline rush right after a race, especially after winning or setting a new personal record. It's an amazing feeling that keeps you wanting more."

Murray said she would like to run track in college, and so far a few schools have shown interest in her, but no scholarship have come in as of yet.

She said she hopes to attend an out-of-state school to pursue a career in medicine with a focus on dermatology.

At Fallbrook High, Murray is a member of the Tomahawk newspaper staff and is involved in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Palmerin returns to San Diego as Tacoma Stars player

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

Mikel Palmerin returned to San Diego County as a member of the Major Arena Soccer League's Tacoma Stars when the Stars played the San Diego Sockers in a Feb. 15 game at Pechanga Arena in San Diego.

Palmerin, who graduated from Fallbrook High School in 2007, saw action in the Sockers' 6-4 victory which was also Landon Donovan's first MASL game.

"It's a great night for the sport, and I'm just happy that I can come back tonight and be a part of it," Palmerin said.

The game attracted 8,492 spectators, and some of those were from the Rancho Santa Fe Attack club Palmerin has coached.

"My old team's put a little fire underneath me," he said.

Palmerin spent three seasons with the Sockers organization but was primarily on the team's reserve squad. He split 2011-2012 between the Sockers and the developmental team and played nine games for the Sockers, but in 2010-2011 and 2012-2013, he was on the reserve team only. He spent 2013-2014 with the Ontario Fury and played 14 games that season, scoring 12 goals and adding four assists. He was also with the Fury for 2014-2015.

"I took some time off, started my own business," Palmerin said.

Playing turned out to be Palmerin's preferred activity.

"Missed it too much," he said. "I decided to take some time off from coaching and come back."

Palmerin coached at a camp in Sandpoint, Idaho, along with former Sockers and Stars player Evan McNeley and current Stars player Mike Ramos. Ramos suggested that Palmerin explore the possibility of playing for Tacoma.

"I decided to go up and try out," Palmerin said. "Coach liked me and asked me to stay."

Darren Sawatzky began the 2018-2019 season as the Stars' head coach, although in December he accepted a position as the coach of FC Tucson in the outdoor United Soccer League which will be a new professional league this year. Nick Perera, who has played for the Sockers including one season when Palmerin was with the San Diego organization, became the Stars' player-coach.

Palmerin scored his first goal with the Stars in the team's Jan. 4 game at El Paso. Perera provided the assist.

A Dec. 28, 2013, game was Palmerin's first in San Diego as a visiting player against the Sockers. Palmerin took four shots for the Fury including one on goal in the second quarter. The Sockers goalkeeper who saved that shot, Chris Toth, is also a 2007 Fallbrook High School graduate. Palmerin and Toth have been friends since they were in second grade at Maie Ellis Elementary School and played together at Mira Costa College and the Sockers reserve team as well as at Fallbrook High School and with the Sockers.

Toth was traded to the Ontario Fury in November. Although Toth and Palmerin never played for the Ontario Fury at the same time, they were also with the Fallbrook Fury club team together.

Before the trade Toth and Boris Pardo split time as the Sockers' goalkeeper. The trade allowed both to be first-string goalies. Pardo stopped five shots in the Feb. 15 game against the Stars.

"He had a couple of amazing saves, kept them in the game, and that was the difference," Palmerin said.

Palmerin himself did not take any shots in that game.

"It's good to be home and play in front of all my family," Palmerin said. "It was really my first game with the Stars where all my friends and family could be out here, so that was real special."

Donovan, who turned 37, March 4, spent 15 seasons with Major League Soccer teams including 11 with the Los Angeles Galaxy and was on the United States men's national team from 2000 to 2014 including appearances in the 2002, 2006 and 2010 World Cup tournaments. He is the all-time leading scorer for both the U.S. men's national team and MLS, and he has also played professionally in Germany, England and Mexico.

"I've been a big fan of Landon Donovan," Palmerin said.

Donovan had not previously played professional indoor soccer.

"He's coming into our world now, and it's nice," Palmerin said. "When guys like him step into the indoor arena this sport's not a joke."

Many of the fans Feb. 15 were there to see Donovan's debut, and others had the opportunity to witness Palmerin's return to San Diego as a MASL player. Fans were also present to see other players on the Sockers and Stars.

"Just appreciate all the support," Palmerin said. "We do this for back home for all the people who for one reason or another couldn't continue in their soccer career."

Sanchez wins Robert Jenkins Memorial tournament

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

Fallbrook High School junior Kevin Sanchez won the 126-pound class at the Robert Jenkins Memorial wrestling tournament, Jan. 26, at Mount Miguel High School.

Seven Fallbrook wrestlers competed in the tournament, and six of those placed in the Top seven.

"We did pretty well there," Fallbrook coach Cristian Vera said. "I couldn't be happier with my group of guys."

Although the Warriors only filled seven of the 14 weight classes, Fallbrook still placed eighth as a team.

"They wrestled great. They wrestled phenomenal," Vera said. "I'm very happy with it."

Sanchez received a first-round bye. He pinned his quarterfinal and semifinal opponents to set up a championship match against Grossmont High School junior Sebastian Coates. Sanchez defeated Coates in an 8-7 decision.

"It was a fantastic final. They were back and forth. Kevin found a way to win at the end," Vera said.

The match was the last for Sanchez before the CIF Division II tournament.

"There's no better way to go to CIF than at the top of the podium," Vera said.

Javier Montoya placed third in the heavyweight division. The junior lost in the semifinals but won his third-place match.

"He did really well," Vera said. "He's on the right track to become one of the top scorers in the heavyweight division."

Although the tournament had a double-elimination format, the CIF has a limit of five matches in one day, so any wrestler who lost in the first round had to advance in the consolation bracket and could finish no higher than fifth. If the field was large enough the consolation bracket wrestlers were limited to four matches.

Three Fallbrook wrestlers lost in the semifinals and lost a consolation bracket match to receive an unspecified fifth-place or sixth-place finish: sophomore Uriel Juarez in the 132-pound bracket, junior Marco Alejandro in the 120-pound division and freshman Ethan Ellefsen in the 106-pound class.

"They all wrestled fantastic. They all wrestled phenomenal matches," Vera said.

Because the positions were unspecified the fifth-place or sixth-place wrestlers did not receive medals.

"It was just unfortunate that they didn't get a chance to wrestle for a medal," Vera said.

Carlos Hernandez lost to his seeded 195-pound opponent in the opening match, but the junior took a seventh-place finish.

"He wrestled back," Vera said.

Seventh place earned a wrestler a medal, and Hernandez won his ensuing three matches to take home one of those.

"He pinned all three of his opponents and was on a mission to get a medal," Vera said.

Zinniger takes over as Warriors’ head boys lacrosse coach

Warrior Cole Traut attempts to get a pass against Del Lago Academy, March 18. Fallbrook won 12-1.

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

Mike Zinniger was Fallbrook High School’s junior varsity lacrosse coach from 2016 to 2018. This year he is the Warriors’ varsity head coach.

“So far I’m liking it,” Zinniger said. “It’s a little different than JV.”

Zinniger now has administrative activities as well as training players.

“It’s a lot different than JV,” he said. “It’s a little bit more challenging, but I like it so far.”

Brian Kimmell, who was the Warriors’ varsity coach, will be moving so Zinniger transitioned from the junior varsity level to the varsity level.

“They asked me to step up and give it a go,” he said.

Zinniger’s lacrosse playing career consists of two years on the Chico State club team. He was raised in Oceanside and graduated from El Camino High School in 1984.

“Never heard of lacrosse. I didn’t start playing until I was 22,” he said. “It was kind of slowly starting to come to the West Coast.”

While at El Camino High School he played baseball and football. The Wildcats’ football coach at the time was Herb Meyer, who coached at the school from 1976 to 2003 and previously coached at Oceanside High School from 1959 to 1975. “Herb Meyer was a big influence on me,” Zinniger said. “I take a lot of his philosophies.”

Football and lacrosse also have similar footwork, so playing for Meyer also aided Zinniger’s coaching skills in that aspect.

“I take a lot of the football drills,” Zinniger said.

Zinniger played football for Chico State for a year before switching to lacrosse.

Mike and Suzanne Zinniger have three children: Gabby graduated from Fallbrook High School in 2015, Zach is a 2017 Fallbrook High School graduate and Josh is currently a senior at the high school. Mike Zinniger began coaching lacrosse when his children began playing.

“I kind of started out at the youth level just volunteering,” he said.

Frank Rotunda oversaw the youth programs when Zinniger began coaching. Paul Morgan was Fallbrook’s varsity lacrosse coach when Zinniger began with the junior varsity.

“Those two sure taught me a lot,” Zinniger said. “They mentored me, and it was great to coach under them and learn.”

Ryan Farish and Drew Tippen are this year’s junior varsity co-coaches. Tom Gillcrist is the boys varsity assistant coach as well as the girls junior varsity coach. Zinniger noted the advantage of having a full coaching staff.

“It gets more one-on-one with the kids,” he said.

Zinniger did not cut any of the 38 players who tried out for the varsity and junior varsity teams.

Zinniger said.

The varsity consists of 20 players with the other 18 players comprising the Warriors’ junior varsity. In boys’ high school lacrosse, 12 players from each team are on the field at one time.

“We’ve got a pretty good group of seniors who have been playing since sixth grade,” Zinniger said.

When those players were in sixth grade, Zinniger was their coach.

The National Lacrosse League added expansion franchises in San Diego and Philadelphia for the 2019 season, bring the professional indoor lacrosse league to 11 teams. The San Diego Seals had their first home match at Pechanga Arena, originally the San Diego International Sports Arena, Jan. 12 and regular-season competition will continue through April.

“We’re getting a lot of new kids who have never played before,” Zinniger said. “It’s starting to take off and more kids are getting involved in it.”

The Warriors began their season March 5 with a 15-5 home victory against Mission Hills. A March 8 trip to El Camino produced an 11-5 Fallbrook win.

“It’s been a nice start,” Zinniger said.

The administrative activities include fundraising, and for Zinniger that has been a task but not an impairment.

“We’ve had a lot of great support from the parents and the community,” he said.

Legionnaires place 6 on all-league girls basketball teams

Joe Naiman
Village News Correspondent

The Pioneer League coaches meeting which selected all-league girls basketball players gave all-league recognition to six members of Bonsall High School’s team.

The first team included Bonsall freshman Estrella Garcia. Two of the Legionnaires’ sophomores, Katrina Manzano and Jazmine Zottolo, were second-team selections. Honorable mention distinction was given to seniors Miacai Meluat and Casimilla Mendiola and to freshman Grace Ferrante.

“That was interesting. Six is a lot,” Bonsall coach Bernard Cantrell said.

Logic would indicate that the five starters and the sixth man – or sixth girl – would comprise the six all-league players, but that was not the case for the Bonsall players who received Pioneer League honors.

“That was the odd thing,” Cantrell said. “The only full-time starters on the first two teams are Katrina and Estrella.”

Horizon Prep was declared the Pioneer League champion; the Lions’ only league loss was a forfeit to Bonsall which reversed Horizon’s on-court win. King-Chavez Community did not complete its season and Bonsall’s league record designated the Legionnaire’s two scheduled matches against King-Chavez as no contest rather than as forfeit wins. The forfeit win over Horizon gave Bonsall a 7-1 league record, which matched the Horizon record excluding the King-Chavez scheduled games. Bonsall had an overall season record of 7-6. The only Pioneer League opponent

King-Chavez played, School for Entrepreneurship and Technology, was third in the league standings with a 5-4 record not including the second-round forfeit win over King-Chavez.

The selection of Garcia to the first team didn’t surprise Cantrell or any of the league’s other coaches.

“It was a no-brainer for everybody in there. There was no hesitation or questions,” Cantrell said.

Garcia was the Legionnaire’s point guard. Manzano played wing, which depending on the formation made her a shooting guard or a small forward.

“If you’d have asked me in the first two weeks I’d be shocked, but after that there was no shock,” Cantrell said of Manzano’s second-team selection.

“I couldn’t imagine coaching against her and not having to mention her at practice,” Cantrell said of Manzano. “She impacted the game exactly the way you’d want your point guard to offensively and defensively.”

Manzano forced opponents to adjust to her skills during the second round of league play.

“Nobody pressed us the second time they played us,” Cantrell said. “If you give her the ball, she’s just too fast. She ruins presses.”

Zottolo was a utility player rather than a true starter.

“She plays all positions except point guard,” Cantrell said. “She started against the two best teams in our league. She started at center.”

Her roles against different opponents provided her with the second-team distinction.

“That was kind of a shock to me, but she’s my most skilled player,”

Cantrell said.

Cantrell cited an increase in consistency for Zottolo.

“This year she came out of her shell two or three or maybe four games,” Cantrell said. “She turned last year’s occasional moments into quarters and halves this year.”

That included her performance against those closest to Bonsall in the league standings.

“She played well against the teams that mattered the most,” Cantrell said. “Last year she played good against bad teams and horrible against good teams.”

Ferrante also played wing.

“She might have started two games, but she had two 20-point games,” Cantrell said.

Mendiola played center. Meluat was primarily a power forward but also played center, wing and point guard.

Escondido company recalls California-grown avocados

City News Service
Special to Village News

An Escondido-based company is recalling California-grown avocados due to concerns of listeria contamination. Henry Avocado Corporation is voluntarily recalling California-grown whole avocados sold in bulk because they may have been contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes, the company said in a news release. There were no reported illnesses, but the decision was made “out of an abundance of caution” because of positive test results on samples taken during a routine government inspection of a California packing facility, the statement said. The recalled avocados were grown in California and distributed throughout the state as well as in Arizona, Florida, New Hampshire, North Carolina and Wisconsin, the company said. All shipments to date from the packing plant, which the grower only began using in January, are subject to the recall. Henry Avocado said it is reaching out to stores to make sure the recalled avocados are immediately removed from store shelves. Consumers can identify the recalled products by the “Bravocado” stickers on the skin. Organic Henry Avocado products don’t have those stickers, and instead are labeled “organic” and include “California” on their stickers. Retailers can identify the recalled avocados by their barcodes. The company said avocados imported from Mexico are not subject to recall and are still safe to be sold and consumed. Listeria monocytogenes can cause fever, stiffness, nausea, diarrhea and other symptoms and can sometimes be fatal for young children, elderly people or others with weakened immune systems.

Healthy people usually only suffer short-term symptoms, but the illness can have dangerous impacts for pregnant women, including stillbirths and miscarriages.

Drive safely in San Diego and earn Hyperdrive Rewards

SAN DIEGO – Local Media San Diego, the innovative radio broadcasting company behind three of San Diego’s premiere radio stations, 91X XTRA-FM, Z90.3 XHTZ-FM and Magic 92.5 XHRM-FM, announced a partnership with ConnectedTravel to launch the HyperDrive Rewards mobile application, in an attempt to make the city’s roads safer to drive. HyperDrive Rewards is a free application that helps users learn about their driving routines and offers rewards for every day safe driving. Up to $75,000 in cash prizes and rewards is being given away to new and daily HyperDrive Rewards app users for the launch campaign. HyperDrive Rewards tells drivers when and where they speed, how often they use their phone, how they accelerate and how they brake. Drivers earn points with safe driving habits and additional bonus points for improving their driving by completing various challenges such as not speeding, no phone handling, limiting rapid acceleration and hard braking and driving under safe conditions. Other point-earning methods include completing in-app surveys, visiting designated websites, watching videos and playing the in-app games. It also enables them to compete against other drivers. Every participating driver can redeem the points they earned for gift cards at retailers like Walmart, Target, Best Buy, Home Depot, Apple and Amazon. Every driver also has a chance to compete with other drivers to win weekly cash prizes of $1,000.00 and gas cards valued at $150.

“The Hyperdrive app is a big step to improving driving habits in San Diego,” Gregg Wolfson, the vice president and general manager of Local Media San Diego, said. “We believe the reward system for better driving is a better alternative than receiving a moving vehicle citation.” According to San Diego Police Department data, the city saw an 80 percent increase in distracted driving citations in 2017, including a 346 percent increase in tickets given to motorists who were texting while driving. HyperDrive Rewards aims to change for the better by encouraging San Diego drivers to drive safer and be rewarded for their positive habits. “We are very excited about this partnership and being able to introduce a platform that will encourage safer driving habits amongst San Diego residents,” Bryan Biniak, CEO of ConnectedTravel, said. “With traffic accidents on the rise and more people getting hurt, we are proud to be able to offer a solution that makes safe driving rewarding.” HyperDrive Rewards is available to download on the Apple App Store and Google’s Play store. Local Media San Diego LLC is a San Diego-based media company that owns and operates Z90.3 XHTZ-FM; 91X XTRA-FM; Magic 92.5 XHRM-FM; Local Media Digital Labs, a locally focused digital solutions provider, Local Media San Diego Events for lifestyle event production and offers in-house video and audio production. E.J. Meyer receives FPUd’s DeLuz Road pipeline replacement contract

Village News Correspondent

E.J. Meyer Company was awarded the contract to replace the Fallbrook Public Utility District’s DeLuz Road pipeline. FPUd’s board voted 4-0, Feb. 25, with Jennifer DeMeo absent, to approve the contract award for the $888,888 amount submitted by the Highland company. “It’s a line we had scheduled for replacement,” FPUd general manager Jack Bebee said. FPUd’s pipeline and valve replacement program utilizes a priority list of replacement projects which are identified based on the age of the facilities and the rates of past failures. The DeLuz Road pipeline was identified as a priority due to its age, condition and leak history. “It actually broke a few months ago and shut off access to DeLuz,” Bebee said. The replacement work includes approximately 2,200 linear feet of eight-inch cement mortar lined and coated steel pipe with associated appurtenances and 74 feet of eight-inch polyvinyl chloride sewer pipe. FPUd staff prepared a design package and solicited bids from general contractors. Eight companies submitted bids. Direct Project Inc. submitted the lowest bid at $841,330, but the Fontana company had an incorrect bid bond form which did not have the necessary notary acknowledgement, so the Direct Project bid was deemed to be non-responsive and E.J. Meyer Company was declared the lowest responsible bidder. Although FPUd’s 2018-2019 budget allocated only $408,000 for the project the increase in the cost of steel has increased the cost to construct steel water lines. Due to the high priority of the DeLuz Road pipeline replacement project the timing of other capital improvement projects will be adjusted to ensure that FPUd does not exceed its overall water capital projects budgeted amount. Work is expected to begin this spring. “It will take three to six months,” Bebee said. The work on the project will force the closure of one of the DeLuz Road lanes, creating a combined one lane for the road while work is in progress. “We’ll be providing updates once we have a schedule,” Bebee said.

County unemployment dips to 3.5 percent in February

City News Service
Special to Village News

San Diego County’s unadjusted unemployment rate dipped to 3.5 percent in February, with both farm and nonfarm employment showing gains, the California Employment Development Department announced. The county’s adjusted unemployment rate sat at 3.8 percent in January, its highest point since the third quarter of 2017. February’s unadjusted rate is the same as its revised 2018 unemployment rate, according to the EDD. Nonfarm industries added 9,700 jobs between January and February, with total nonfarm employment increasing from 1,480,100 to 1,489,800. Total farm jobs increased by 400 from 8,100 in January to 8,500 last month.

Multiple nonfarm industries showed job gains in the thousands. The professional and business services industry increased by 4,100 jobs, the most of any industry in the county. The trade, transportation and utilities industry decreased the most of any in the county, falling by 2,600 jobs. Year-over-year nonfarm employment increased by 19,900 jobs, from 1,469,900 in February 2018 to 1,489,800 last month. The educational and health services industry showed the largest year-over-year employment gains at 6,900, pacing multiple industries that showed yearly job gains of more than 3,000. Like the county’s month-over-month job market, the trade, transportation and utilities industry had the largest year-over-year decrease in job numbers, falling by the same number of jobs from 223,600 in February 2018 to 221,000 last month. Total farm employment decreased from 9,000 to 8,500 last month. The state’s unadjusted unemployment rate in February remained unchanged from January’s adjusted unemployment rate of 4.2, according to the EDD. U.S. unemployment decreased slightly to an unadjusted 3.8 percent in February.

South Coast Winery Resort & Spa will once again host its spring “Blessing of the Vines,” a long standing historical tradition where clergy bless grape vines before the growing season begins.

This year’s event, scheduled for Sunday, April 7, will feature a blessing offered by Monsignor Tom Burdick.

Following the blessing guests at the event will participate in four food and wine pairings, along with a dinner and dessert buffet.

Live music for the event, running from 5 to 8 p.m., will be provided by the popular Temecula cover band, Big Truth.

Tickets for the event are $75 for wine club members or $85 for non-members and all ticket holders will receive their choice of a bottle of South Coast’s Gold Medal red or white wine per couple – either 2014 Wild Horse Peak Merlot or 2018 Sauvignon Blanc.

Assigned seating, with guests’ seating preference, will be available. Guests may choose from seating in the courtyard to be closer to the stage or on the tiered terrace steps for a quieter, more private experience while space is available.

To purchase tickets or for more information, including an event menu, visit www.southcoastwinery.com/blessing or call (855) 241-4014.

For more special events at South Coast Winery Resort & Spa, at 34843 Rancho California Road in Temecula, visit www.southcoastwinery.com.
